The introduction of Vespa (“hornet” in Italian) has created a buzz. Cortina has combined a unique color palette, a distinctive texture and a contrasting surface treatment to produce one of the most unusual leathers on the market today. Unlike many tipped leathers that are produced on half-hides or leather “splits,” Vespa is made using large European whole hides that are substantial enough to hold a pebbled grain, yet light and supple enough for upholstery use. Usually tipped leather is produced with a simple black wash. However, each Vespa hide is treated with a tone-on-tone finish, specifically chosen to enhance the base color, resulting in a sophisticated new variety of tipped leather.
